First and foremost, MANY thanks to all who made it out to The Global Summit this weekend. We've read the stories, seen the pictures and wish we could have been there with you all. We look forward to hearing your recordings and having you, THE ECHELON, be such an exciting part of our new album.

We have another important announcement to make. We are launching a new experimental project called "The Hive". Essentially, The Hive is a collective that will be focused on spearheading, developing and executing creative ideas to further the MARS experience, on developing and pushing MARS missions worldwide, on rallying the troops and spreading the good word online and offline about everything THIRTYSECONDESTOMARS. If you are interested in being directly involved with The Hive as a soldier or leader we are looking for you. We have created a new forum on the Thirty Seconds to Mars message board entitled, The Hive, so you may start to discuss any and all Mission ideas, tactics, strategies and dreams. The first order of business The Hive asks of you is to begin to identify ECHELON leaders around the world you all think have the responsibility, initiative and passion needed to help lead the charge for our brand new release.

The first offline location for The Hive will be in Los Angeles with potentially more to follow worldwide. There will be times open for Echelon to come work with us in LA and be a part of the plotting, planning and execution.

As it has been said...."The war is coming..."

Keep an eye out for future updates and developments by reading The Hive message board thread.
